

THE POSSESSION REPORT

POWERED BY PBR

COMPLETE GAME RECAP · NEW YORK 107 — SAN ANTONIO 106

NBA Finals, Game 4 — a complete possession-by-possession breakdown of the game.

Dear Reader,

Thank you for opening The Possession Report. Before you turn the page, let me tell you what you're holding — and how to read it.

This is not a box score. A box score tells you what happened — the points, the rebounds, the totals. This report tells you what it meant. Every possession in the game was graded for what it was actually worth, then turned into one clear picture of who moved the game and who didn't.

We call the engine behind it PBR. You won't find a formula in these pages, and that's on purpose — the math is ours. What we hand you are the results: the scores, the rankings, and a simple read, on every page, of who added value and who cost it.

ADDS VALUE

The play, player, or unit moved the game forward.

COSTS VALUE

It set the team back — a stop, a turnover, a miss.

CERTIFIED 100%

All available data captured — or marked Not Available.

A couple of things make it an easy read:

- ◆ You can land on any page and the labels tell you exactly what you're looking at — no decoder needed.
- ◆ It's built entirely from official box scores and play-by-play — nothing hidden, nothing padded, nothing fabricated.

The idea is simple, and it comes from a lifetime around the game: anybody can count what happened. Winning comes from understanding what it meant. That's what this report is built to show you — the way a coach sees a game.

If anything doesn't make sense, that's on us, not you — reach out anytime. Thank you for your time, and for trusting us with it.

Sincerely,

Herman Johnson Jr.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY · 2 OF 3

The Game Verdict

The whole report in one page. A coach, player, scout, or sponsor should understand this game in 60 seconds — then turn the page for the evidence.

The largest comeback in NBA Finals history.

San Antonio led by 29 in the third quarter; New York won the second half 58–30 and took the game at the buzzer.

Why New York won	Evidence	What it means
Second half	58 pts vs 30	A 27-point halftime deficit erased — the game flipped at the break and never flipped back
Fourth quarter	32–16 · PBiR +46 to +10	New York owned the final twelve minutes on the scoreboard and the possessions
Shot quality	36-78 (46%) vs 36-86 (42%)	Eight fewer attempts, the same 36 makes — better looks all night
Three-point value	15-32 (47%) vs 17-43 (40%)	Eleven fewer threes attempted, nearly the same made — Anunoby went 7-of-9
The last 1.2 seconds	Anunoby tip-in	Blocked Fox's layup at one end, beat three Spurs to Brunson's miss at the other

Why New York won

1. Won the second half by 28
2. Anunoby +36 — 33 points on 10-of-15, 7-of-9 from deep
3. Brunson +33 — 36 points after an 0-for-4 first quarter
4. Starters +124 — the first five won it themselves
5. Won the last rebound of the night

Why San Antonio came up short

1. A 29-point lead produced a 30-point half
2. Q3 and Q4 PBiR: +3 and +10 — the engine stalled
3. Wembanyama 24 and 13, but on 9-25 shooting
4. 17-of-43 from three — hot early, cold late
5. Fox swatted on the final drive; Castle's two free throws weren't enough

ONE-SENTENCE VERDICT

San Antonio built a 29-point lead; New York took it back one possession at a time and won it on the glass with 1.2 seconds left.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY · 3 OF 3 — THE BOTTOM LINE

The Bottom Line

WHAT THE POSSESSIONS SAY — THE FIVE THINGS THAT DECIDED NEW YORK 107, SAN ANTONIO 106

FACTOR	EDGE	WHAT IT MEANT
Second half	New York 58, San Antonio 30	A 27-point halftime deficit erased — the largest comeback in NBA Finals history.
Fourth quarter	NY 32–16	New York +46 to +10 on the PBiR in the final twelve minutes.
Shot quality	NY 36-78 (46%) · SA 36-86 (42%)	Eight fewer attempts, the same 36 makes — better looks all night.
Three-point value	NY 15-32 · SA 17-43	Eleven fewer threes attempted, nearly the same made.
The last 1.2 seconds	Anunoby tip-in	Blocked Fox at one end, beat three Spurs to Brunson's miss at the other.

Bottom line: San Antonio led by 29 and won the impact totals; New York won the half, the quarter, the minute, and the game. The scoreboard says 1; the possessions say the second half was never close — New York won it +69 to +13 after the break on the PBiR.

TWO DIFFERENT CROWNS — DON'T MIX THEM UP

THE EFFICIENCY THERMOMETER — PBR PER MINUTE, 12+ MINUTES PLAYED. 1.00 = A FULL POINT OF IMPACT FOR EVERY MINUTE ON THE FLOOR.

Read the thermometer like a speedometer — it measures how FAST a player produced impact, not how much. O. Anunoby's +36 was the biggest TOTAL of the night; K. Towns's 1.00 per minute was the fastest RATE — he packed +26 into just 26 foul-troubled minutes. Team rates were just as tight: San Antonio produced 1.11 impact per possession to New York's 1.09 across roughly 105 possessions each — a one-point game in the rates, too.

DEEP DIVE · THE SPOKEN SUMMARY

The Spoken Summary — the game in a coach's voice

THE GAME, IN A COACH'S VOICE — THE READBACK THAT LANDS IN YOUR INBOX

New York wins Game 4 at the Garden, 107–106, and takes a 3–1 lead in the Finals — on the largest comeback in NBA Finals history. Down 29 in the third quarter. Down 27 at the half. Won it on a tip-in with 1.2 seconds left.

San Antonio's first half was a clinic: 76–49 on the scoreboard, +104 to +44 on the PBR, Wembanyama and Fox ruling the early quarters. Then the game turned and never turned back. New York took the third 26–14 and the fourth 32–16, winning the second half +69 to +13 on the possessions.

OG Anunoby was the game: +36, the night's high — 33 points on 10-of-15, 7-of-9 from three, the block on Fox's last drive, and the tip-in that won it. Brunson went for +33 and 36 points after an 0-for-4 first quarter. Hart added +28, Towns +26 in 26 foul-troubled minutes. For the Spurs, Wembanyama's 24 and 13 came on 9-of-25, and Vassell's +26 on 5-of-8 from deep wasn't enough.

The takeaway: down 29, the response wasn't one run — it was 24 straight minutes of winning possessions. That's how a one-point final hides a 28-point half. That's a 3–1 lead.
